"A STYLISH NEW SPRING BONNET."

A girl may be both young and fair,
A sweet and winning creature,
She may have hair of golden hue
And loveliness of feature;
She may be dressed in silk attire—
Of such I write my sonnet—
But to be perfect she must wear
A stylish new spring bonnet.

Satin its strings, modest its plumes,
A pair of broad dimensions,
Thus should the bonnet fairly match
Its wearer's sweet pretensions;
And when she shines with all her charms
Casting their glow upon it,
Our hearts and heads are all bewitched
By this fine new spring bonnet.

Although a lady may be plain—
Yes, ugly as to feature—
Her hair bright red, her eyes light green—
In fact, a homely creature;
Yet if her bonnet is the style,
The ladies, dear, they're human!
Will all extol in as with one breath
Oh! what a charming woman!

We see bright bonnets here and there
Peep out like sweet spring flowers;
Well they constitute the face and gold,
These shady hats of ours!
And, bonnets, would you have on earth
The happiest woman on it?
Take home some pleasant April night,
A stylish new spring bonnet.

AT THE SEA OF GALILEE

Row down, my spirit, and adore, as thus I turn to thee,
Thou cherished spot of all the earth, thrice hallowed Galilee
The waves still wash thy barren shores where He stretched forth, to save,
His hands which had the power alone to combat with the grave.
To those lone waters, thus impressed, my spirit leads me still,
While every thought and impulse bows obedient to His will.

Back rolls the tide of centuries as on my dreamy gaze
Break sacred scenes and god-like form made bright by morning's rays,
The hush of the great multitude, all listening, struck with awe,
The solemn, loving words which urged fulfilment of the law:
"The manna that by heaven was sent thy fathers ate in strife;
I charge ye turn your hearts to me. I am the Bread of life."

The vision's gone, the dream has fled—what breaks upon my ear?
No teachings of a God of love—threats of a God of fear;
The pompous prelate's lordly voice, impugning the Most High,
Can never teach men how to live nor show them how to die.
But my spirit melts, my heart bows down, my soul turns back to Thee
On the lonely shore, by the silent waves of the Sea of Galilee.

Select Story.

A LITTLE GOLD OWL.

"Do you know what a famous Russian beauty once wrote in her album? No? Let me tell you, then. 'The Frenchman best understands the art of talking love, the Italian of acting it, but the German rocks it to sleep, while the Pole ruins it all.'"

"And the American?" pleaded a musical voice in the ear of the first speaker.

The lady made no immediate reply. The pair stood in the wings of a tiny amateur theater in one of our large cities, and the drama of Matrimony, in which they had acted, was over. Both were artists in that intense sentiment of excitement which stirs the ripples of private life when theatricals and charades become the fashion. Augusta Bevan, tall, slender and proud, had resumed her velvet walking dress, and toyed with a tiny muff of pink satin which was suspended about her neck by means of a ribbon. Captain Hornblower, easy, graceful and elegant, bent over her in an attitude of devotion which he had assumed with the facility of a glove for the past fifteen years in the ball rooms of West Point, Saratoga and Newport.

"Your muff seems to be a sort of fairy casket," pursued Captain Hornblower. "Give me a keepsake from one of the pockets, I beg, in remembrance of the night."

"What shall it be?" retorted Augusta Bevan gayly.

She sought in the tiny pockets of perfumed and quilted satin, and drew forth a glittering object. This was a little gold owl, beautifully wrought, with ruby eyes and jeweled claws. When a spring was touched, a slender pencil case slid out of the bird's head.

"Here is my gift," she said, gently, and the gallant captain understood that her words meant capitulation.

Was he glad or sorry? He received the little gold owl with effusive gratitude, and kissed the hand which bestowed the gift; but it was in the nature of this military butterfly to doubt, at the moment, if he had acted with unwise precipitation, if he had not sold himself too cheaply in the matrimonial market, and if Augusta Bevan was as great an heiress as she was reputed to be.

"My children, remember the Scotch proverb. 'Those who fish for minnows never catch trout,'" said Mr. Riddel, behind them.

Mr. Riddel, who invariably enacted the part of benevolent old man, proffered his snuff-box to Captain Hornblower with his quizzical smile.

"We are called out again!" exclaimed Mrs. Trentham.

There was a patter of applause, and the four emerged before the foot-lights, making their salutations in the most approved professional manner. On the stage stood Mrs. Trentham in a superb toilet, Augusta Bevan, Captain Hornblower and Mr. Riddel. Beyond the circle of foot-lights was a fashionable audience, where blended satin, gold, feathers and lace resembled a parterre of flowers, while the little theater, built for Mrs. Trentham, made a charming background for smiling faces. Certainly the two actresses looked their best, for Captain Hornblower deeply versed in such craft, had made up their stage complexion, with the aid of rouge and other cosmetics, moist purple worsted furnishing the requisite shadows beneath the eyes.

Said Mr. Riddel, as he conducted Miss Bevan home: "You will not forget my proverb, Augusta?—'Those who fish for minnows never catch trout.'"

The girl glanced askance at him and frowned. Mr. Riddel, divested of gray wig and paternal bearing, was a dignified gentleman of forty years, lawyer, and manager of the great Bevan property.

"You have always warned me of fortune-hunters and worthless suitors since I left school," she exclaimed, petulantly. "Is a woman never to believe in any one because she is rich?"

Mr. Riddel remained silent, but the blood mounted to his brow.

Said Mrs. Trentham to Captain Hornblower, at a little supper table in a fashionable restaurant: "Augusta Bevan really did very well to-night for a novice, except in the awkwardness of her attitudes. Allow me to look at the little gold owl she gave you behind the scenes. Ah! I saw it all. A manager must be everywhere, you know."

Very piquant looked Mrs. Trentham as she spoke, coquette of as many seasons as her companion had posed for beau, an arch sparkle in her eyes, more than a suspicion of malice in her smile; for to see any man admire another woman pierced her vanity, if not her heart, and she could not rest until she had lured him away from his allegiance, or at least sown mischief in the path of possible lovers. Yet Mrs. Trentham was a most popular person and an acknowledged leader of society. Captain Hornblower resisted; but the enchantress was adroit, witty, flattering, and the supper good, and in the end he yielded. The lady attached the little gold owl to her watch chain, and emerged in the streets at 2 o'clock in the morning. When she reached her own home the little gold owl was gone! She had lost it during the walk.

Next day Mrs. Trentham sailed up to Augusta Bevan, at a crowded kettle-drum, took both of her hands, and exclaimed: "Oh, my dear, I am so dreadfully sorry! I am always committing some folly. I do not deserve forgiveness. Captain Hornblower gave me—I mean lent me—your little gold owl last night, and I actually lost it in the street."

The Sevres teacup fell from Augusta's fingers on the floor. Mr. Riddel and Captain Hornblower stooped for the fragments simultaneously, thus knocking their heads together.

"She is disillusioned," thought Mr. Riddel.

"The game is lost," reflected the gallant warrior, with unfeigned regret. "Of course no woman ever forgave that."

At 6 o'clock that morning a young Swiss maiden, by name Marie Hartzel, had gone on an errand to the market for her mistress. Marie was sixteen, with a round brown face framed in a crimped cap, and carried a basket on her arm. Her feet struck against a small object: she stooped and found a little gold owl on the curbstone.

"Himmel!" exclaimed Marie, and sped with the treasure to the lager beer garden where Fritz, her lover, was employed as a waiter.

Fritz happened to be polishing the rows of little tables placed in bowers of evergreen. He was a prudent youth of nineteen with blonde hair, and hard blue eyes. He examined the trinket and put it in his pocket. The gold owl might be very pretty suspended about Marie's throat, even as Roman women rejoice in their hairpins and chains, or the Genoese in their filigree earrings; but money also could be made out of it—money to add to frugal savings wherewith to return to beloved Canton Berne as man and wife and buy a modest farm.

Marie shed a few tears of feminine vanity while yielding to logical argument and trudged home with her basket. Fritz sought a little den of a shop in an obscure quarter and sold the gold article to a jew after much haggling for five dollars, which sum he consigned to a savings bank. Now indeed was the owl lost, hopelessly lost, for it had disappeared in a black shop of a wretched quarter, instead of reposing in the pocket of Miss Bevan's pink satin muff. It happened that the owl had never met with greater appreciation, however. The ruby eyes glowed like flames, while the golden plumage became luminous as the ornament passed from one dusky hand to another.

Finally the Jew took the trinket to a fashionable jeweler celebrated for skilful workmanship in metals, and sold it for a considerable sum. Mr. Riddel, walking down town one morning, paused suddenly before the jeweler's window. He saw a little gold owl suspended by a hook, and radiant in the sunshine. He fancied the bird of wisdom actually winked at him in recognition. He entered the place and bought it promptly.

Augusta Bevan, pale, thoughtful, and with a new tenderness in her bearing, received back the little gold owl. "I have been thinking of so many things of late," she said, softly, placing her hand within the arm of this faithful friend. "I even remember your proverb, 'Those who fish for minnows never catch trout.'"

Mrs. Trentham tapped Captain Hornblower on the arm with her fan at a reception, where the lady was resplendent in a Worth toilet of black satin and old gold. "Mr. Riddel and Augusta Bevan are engaged," she said. "I always knew it would be a match yet. Their property joins, you know, and water does flow to water in that way in our wicked world. Besides, he is really the only man worthy of Augusta.

Captain Hornblower went his way, having been ordered to a fort in Montana Territory. His ability was not increased by the discovery that his hair was growing gray, and that he experienced a twinge of rheumatism in his right knee.—Harper's Weekly.

ALMOST YOUNG AGAIN.

"My mother was afflicted for a long time with neuralgia and a dull, heavy, inactive condition of the whole system; headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physicians or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters, with such good effect that she seems and feels young again, although over 70 years old. We think there is no other medicine fit to use in the family."—A lady in Providence, R. I.—Journal.

THE HEIGHT OF FOLLY.

To wait until you are down on your bed with disease you may not get over for months is the height of folly, when you might be easily cured during the early symptoms by using Parker's Ginger Tonic. It costs only a trifle, can never do any harm, and possesses curative properties in the highest degree. We have known the palest, sickliest looking men, women and children become the rosiest and healthiest, from the timely use of this pure family medicine. FRIGHTFUL CALAMITY.

SINKING OF A PLEASURE STEAMER.

A despatch from London, Ontario, dated May 24th, gives the following account of the sinking of the steamer Victoria, plying between London and Springbank, on the evening of that day:

"It was the first day of the season for the excursion boats to run regular trips, and this circumstance, taken in connection with the public holiday (the Queen's birthday), naturally drew large crowds of pleasure-seekers to the river. Trips were made down the river, a distance of about four miles to Springbank, a place of popular resort, where the city water works are located, and three or four local steamboats took down large loads of excursionists at regular intervals throughout the day.

About four o'clock in the afternoon, the steamer Victoria, of the Thames Navigation Company Line, started from the dock on her fourth and last trip for the day, with a large load of passengers of all ages, variously estimated at from four to six hundred in number. All went well on the down trip, though the boat was so heavily laden that she shipped water in small quantities, occasionally when the crowd would happen to surge to any particular side. On the return trip, when more than half way home, a slight commotion on the boat, said by some to have been caused by the playful pranks of a number of youths on the lower deck and by others ascribed to the boat striking on a snag, caused the crowd out of curiosity to rush to one side, and, as the side of the boat sank with the additional weight, a volume of water a foot or two in depth poured in upon the lower deck, which was crowded with passengers. Instantly the crowd on both decks rushed to the opposite side and their weight, together with that of the water shipped by the boat, caused a lurch from the opposite direction. Then it was that the disaster occurred. The side of the boat sank in the water to the depth of one or two feet, and while the crowd on the lower deck were struggling to save themselves from slipping down into the river, the stanchions supporting the upper deck suddenly gave way and the whole structure, with its load of human beings, came down on those who were below, crushing them on the deck and rendering escape impossible.

The scene that followed cannot be described. The boat continued to settle on its side deeper into the water, taking with it many of the passengers who were stunned by the fall of the upper deck, and were therefore unable to help themselves. Scores sank into the water without consciousness of their fate, while many others who were precipitated into the river unhurt rent the air with their vain appeals for that succor which those of the passengers who were safe were powerless to extend to all in a moment. The utmost exertions were put forth to rescue as many of the drowning ones as possible and many were in this way saved from a watery grave.

As soon as possible help was secured, and the work of recovering the bodies from the river and from the wreck was proceeded with. The bodies were placed on the steamboat Louise as fast as they were brought up and then taken to the company's docks, for identification.

The accident occurred at about a quarter past six, and it was midnight before the bodies so far recovered were brought back to the city. Here a most heartrending scene ensued. The bodies, as fast as they were transferred from the steamer, were laid out in rows on the grass by the river side, all in their holiday attire, and with the aid of torches, the faces were eagerly scanned and hundreds of anxious friends looking for their missing ones. A goodly portion of the drowned are men in middle life, and many are children of tender years. Many were the wails of sorrow which followed the identification of a relative. Perhaps it is a mother who discovers her child, or the child a parent. One man was heard inquiring for four children. As fast as the corpses were claimed they were taken in charge by their friends and removed to their homes.

Almost all business is at a stand still, and crowds line the streets discussing the sad calamity. Solemn stillness prevails in the city. Flags are at half mast and bells are tolling. At the time of writing 238 bodies have been recovered. It is believed that there are several yet beneath the wreck."

GOOD COMPANY, DOUBLE NUMBER.

Good Company ($3.00 a year; Springfield, Mass.) issues Nos. 19 and 20 together, making a double number. Lieutenant Frederick Schwatka, the commander of the Franklin Search Expedition which returned last autumn, has two of his series of articles on experiences and adventures in the Arctic world, under the title, "In the Land of the Midnight Sun." The first tells of previous Franklin expeditions, and the second begins the narrative of his own. In future articles he will continue the story. S. J. Douglass has a paper on the Eskimo race

A long installment, about thirty pages, of a new serial story is given. It is printed anonymously under the title of "Mildred's Caprice." There are also three complete stories.

As befits the season there are numerous articles about travel and adventure in a wide variety of localities. Perhaps the most important of these is a pen picture from Spain entitled "The Caliphate of Cordova." It is enough to say that it is in the best style of Mrs. Lizzie W. Champney, who made a trip through that country last season. Relating to places nearer home are An Ascent of Long's Peak by Mr. Sylvester C. Dunham, and Personal Recollections of the Utes by Mr. Ernest Ingersoll. Others are Guayaquil; Western Pastoral Life, by Alfred T. Bacon; A Fortnight in the Palace of Reeds, by Maurice Thompson; Paris Street Cries, by Jno. Joline Ross; An Old Maid's Dissipations Abroad, by Rachel Carew; Antoine of Bagdad.

Mr. George M. Towle summarizes the life of Carlyle. Articles on miscellaneous topics are Economy in Charity, Mr. D. Otis Kellogg; The Decadence of American Shipping, by Alexander McLean; Modern Whist, by Charles F. Johnson, Jr.; and among the poems are included one to the Poet Whittier by Marian Douglas, and a verse on May Day by Miss Dora Read Goodale.

The opening of the new serial, and the papers on Arctic experiences by Lieutenant Schwatka, offer special attractions to new subscribers, who if they like to read of novel scenes in strange lands will find this number additionally attractive because of its articles of this kind.

The Secrets of Check Raisers.

"Check raising is getting to be one of the lost arts," said an old New York detective, "and as checks are prepared nowadays they are pretty safe. There are some of the crooked men, however, who know all the tricks of removing ink. I was once curious enough to learn how it was that they could so successfully alter a check. Different forgers use different methods. One successful stock forger used equal quantities of lapis halaminariis, common salt and rock alum which he boiled for half an hour in white wine in a new pipkin, or he used a fine sponge shaped like a pencil, which he dipped in equal quantities of nitre and vitriol distilled. As he passed this point over the ink it came right out. Sometimes equal quantities of sulphur and powdered saltpetre, both distilled, were used. For a long time the police did not understand what use was made of a little ball that now and then was found in the possession of a prisoner. This turned out to be made of alkali and sulphur, and was used for removing ink. It is hard to find an ink that will not disappear under one plan of treatment or another. I knew a check raiser who had a small laboratory. He kept bottles of acids of all sorts and a case of camel's hair brushes. With a small quantity of oxalic or muriatic acid, somewhat diluted, and a camel's hair pencil he could paint out any number of ink spots. One or two applications, followed by the use of a blotting pad, would restore the paper to primitive purity. It requires skill and accurate knowledge of chemicals to use any of these plans so as not to injure the texture of the paper or discolor it. If the paper is injured it is not so easy to write upon it again, but by the use of finely powdered pounce, rubbed in lightly with the finger and burnished with an ivory folder, the paper can be repaired. Common writing ink, however, is best removed by the use of oxygenated muriatic acid.

"But the new style of checks, with the amount cut through the paper with a die, are hard to alter. Here is a check with a revenue stamp in old gold color in the centre, and broad lines of red ink are drawn close up to the amount written in. There is another broad line of red ink after the name of the payee. Up in the left-hand corner, where the amount is in figures, you will see that the figures are also cut in between two stars, which are likewise cut through the paper. On the reverse side of the check just over these cut figures is pasted a pink strip which brings the cut figures out in such relief that they cannot be altered without detection. The only way to alter the check is to take out the first written word in the amount in the body of the check and the amount in the corner, and, after replacing them with the raised sum, to inlay a piece of check paper in the place of the cut figures. This inlaying process requires great care and only one or two men in this country are able to do it. The cut figures must be carefully cut out by a sharp, razorlike tool, and cut in such way that the edges of the opening will be bevelled. Then a fresh bit of check paper must be shaped to the size of the opening and fitted in with its edges also bevelled. The edges must be held together with a paste made of flour and strained resin, and carefully pressed. Some pounce rubbed over the lines will conceal the patch unless there is a strong light, and then with the same dye that bankers use raised figures can be inserted. The work is delicate and is not often attempted, as it involves the risk of ruining the check for the amount for which it is good. By the way, the cutting of figures into the check had a curious origin. After a big forgery caused by a raised check some one wrote a letter suggesting the amount for which checks are drawn should be cut through the paper. The suggestion was at once adopted by a man who, I understand made a fortune from it."

Twice Ressurrected.

A woman in Sincarte, Mason county, Ill., to all appearance died. But a few weeks previous to this she had given birth to a child, and was apparently well, with the exception of a nursing sore mouth, from the effects of which she had grown quite weak; so much that her husband thought it necessary to call in a physician, but she objected, insisting upon waiting a few days longer, thinking she could manage the affection without the aid of a physician. She soon afterwards very suddenly sank away, and to all appearances gave up the ghost. The body was kept till the next day about 2 p. m., when it was enclosed in a coffin and taken to the graveyard, followed by a great many mournful friends. In laying her out her arms were tied together above the elbows with a strip of cloth, so that her hands would retain a position across her breast. At the grave some of her friends wished to view her remains and the coffin was opened that they might do so. On moving the lid over the glass they could not see through the moisture on it, and it was then seen that one of her hands had been torn loose from the band and was lying by her side, and her arms were as limber as one alive. The circumstances bore upon the minds of several present, but they still could not entertain any notion but that she was dead. Her hands were again placed in position across her breast and retired with the same strip of cloth, and she was buried. After returning to their homes several of the parties who had noticed that singular appearance of the corpse commenced to talk it over, and they soon raised a doubt in their minds that she was not dead. About 5 o'clock, that same evening several went to the grave and took the body up. On opening the coffin they found fresh moisture on the glass of the coffin lid, and her hands were again broken from the strip of cloth that bound them, and they were both lying by her side, and instead of her limbs being in the least rigid, they and her fingers were flexible. Notwithstanding all this they could not convince themselves but that she was dead, and she was reburied. The matter was generally discussed in the neighborhood, and by the following Sunday the excitement had grown so intense that it was decided to re-exhume her the following day. The next day, Monday, after she had slept beneath the sod for four days and nights, she was again resurrected and taken to her home, where she has been slowly but gradually improving. Her friends entertain the strongest hopes of her recovery, which, if it happens will be a remarkable occurrence, long to be remembered by the people of Sincarte. The way in which this affair was managed was, to say the least, very singular.

The Tremendous Vision of C. B. Rouss.

In the dreamland of delirium, the wild flight of fancy, in the agony of malaria, lingering near the great gates between time and eternity, this writer stood on Broadway in 1981. The children of this generation had been swept away by unsparing time. Where once stood the Metropolitan there now towered a collossal glass and steel concern twenty-one stories high, with five underground. The proprietors paid a hundred thousand rent, had two hundred and eighty departments and two thousand men. Their sales ran to one hundred millions, and their terms cash before delivery. King Credit had long slept in oblivion. Aerial navigation had nearly starved the iron horse, and electricity was the motor of heaven and earth. Four intense dazzling suns illuminated the city as if it were midday. A factory in 358th street, away beyond the Spuyten Duvil, 453 feet high, covered six acres, a grain elevator at Hell Gate 800, and the observatory at Rockaway, upon the Isaack's estate, all solid steel, stood up 1,200 feet, or nearly a quarter of a mile.

The old five and six stories of iron and brown stone had been swept from the track of relentless and resistless science. Manners and language and people had changed, and everthing was grand, massive and stupendous. Wall street had long ago gone to Union Square, and the new City Hall, costing twenty-five millions, occupied the entire square, its flag floating a thousand feet above in the blue azure of Heaven.

The Sun was now a septuple, issued four times a day with a million circulation.

Far Rockaway was the eastern limits of the city, Mount Vernon the northern, Patterson the western, and the population sixteen millions. A pneumatic car whirled to these points every three minutes, transit time seventy

The Columbian.

P. R. ELWELL,
J. E. DITTENDENDER, } Editors.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Friday, June 3, 1881.

The Philadelphia Times ran out of languages on Wednesday, and hadn't a word to throw at the "roosters." Never say di-Alcot McClure.

In view of the disgraceful and disorderly proceedings in the legislature during the past session, it might be well to compel members hereafter, to give bonds for good behavior before they take their seats. The speaker should give double bonds.

A misplaced switch at Beaver Swamp near Trenton, on the Pennsylvania railroad last Monday caused an accident that resulted in the death of two persons and the injury of more than twenty. The train was running fifty five miles an hour and two passenger cars were smashed to pieces.

That high toned and incorruptible sheet, the Harrisburg Patriot says "the nincompoop press is slowly 'catching on' to the idea that this legislature is not so bad that it might not have been worse." This assertion may be taken as official, as the Patriot is undeniably the noblest 'nincom' of them all.

Grant seems determined to lose no chance of lowering himself in such public esteem as he is now held. His latest exploit is a letter urging the legislature of New York to re-elect "our Senators." If there were no other reason why Conkling and Platt should be defeated, this would be sufficient. Imperialism ought to have no support in this country.

The Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin states that ex-Senator Chalfant, of Danville has been favorably mentioned as a Democratic candidate for State Treasurer. Ah, indeed, and who has "mentioned" him, except perhaps Mr. Chalfant himself? Doubtless the Gazette and Republicans generally, would be glad to have the Danville politician nominated—so easy to beat, you know.

The New York Express, John Kelly's organ, is trying to convince its readers that Mr. Tilden is figuring with Mr. Conkling to buy one Senatorship with Democratic votes. It is a perfectly safe thing to discredit any story that emanates from the wretched traitor Kelly, whose betrayal of the Democratic party is well understood. Kelly only represents the most debased elements of the party.

The six-day pedestrian contest in New York, for the O'Leary international belt, ended on Saturday night and the victor was a little fellow named Vint, who made a score of 573½ miles. This beats all former records. Vint only weighs 102 lbs. and is five feet two inches in stature. His pluck and endurance were remarkable and have richly repaid him, as his receipts will be large.

The legislature will adjourn next Thursday, June 9th. Only a few acts of importance have been passed: One of these is the bill providing for a loan of ten millions of dollars, the maximum interest to be four per cent., to meet the maturing indebtedness of the Commonwealth. The session has been chiefly remarkable for personal explanations—matters in which the people of the State take the feeblest kind of interest.

For lo, these many years the newspapers of Philadelphia have been striving to secure a reduction of car fares to five cents. The desired result is as far off, apparently, as when the effort was first made, but the papers keep up the assaults with unabated vigor. The average Philadelphia monopolist is about as stubborn a creature as is known to the present generation and it is doubtful if anything this side of a popular uprising will move him.

Ever since Speaker Hewit threw aside dignity and decorum and descended to scurrility and vulgarity, he has never lost an opportunity to demean himself. On Friday last, he engaged in an unseemly wrangle with Mr. Wolfe, leaving the chair and making disgraceful remarks upon the floor. He insulted Mr. Wolfe and Mr. Nebinger and, after the adjournment, exulted in his reprehensible conduct. How did Hewit happen to acquire the reputation for decency and respectability he had when he entered the House, any way?

The administration of that truly good man Rutherford Hayes proves to have been about as rotten as any the country has ever had. In every department thus far investigated, fraud and corruption have been discovered, and the end is not yet. Perhaps Hayes could not prevent the stealing, as the rascals who put him in the White House insisted upon rewards for their services and refused to part company with the beneficiary of their crime. The namby-pamby morality at the White House is in sickening contrast to the star route plundering and the audacious robberies in the treasury department. What the people desire to know, now, is whether any of the public plunderers are to be punished.

The beauties of a republican form of government are beyond enumeration, so many and varied are the phases of freedom presented for consideration. Occasionally some unusually choice development excites our wonder, such, for instance, as that at Albany recently, where the Vice President of the United States was doing his utmost to injure the President, by striving to secure the re-election of Conkling. Although it is quite generally understood that the Vice President is a mere creature of Lord Roscoe, yet a decent regard for his high office, should have induced him to refrain from proclaiming it so publicly. Arthur ought to do one thing to redeem his tarnished reputation—follow Conkling's lead and resign.

The Governor has vetoed the bill granting pensions to veterans of the Mexican war for the good and sufficient reason that there is no money in the treasury for the payment of such claims. The veto message concludes as follows: "Until adequate provision is made by the General Assembly for the restoration of the finances of the State to a certain and healthy condition, and for the payment of appropriations already overdue, I shall feel it my duty to interpose executive disapproval of measures not strictly necessary, which impose additional burdens on the treasury."

There can be no doubt of the justice and force of this argument and it will meet with popular approval. Beyond this, the payment of pensions is a matter which properly belongs to the general government.

Grant is on his way back from Mexico and will of course rush to the rescue of Roscoe at Albany. If the Republicans of New York wish to earn the respect of the great body of the American people they will reject Conkling and snub Grant. It is hard to convince the ex-President that imperialism is dead but that is a good way to try.

The Greenbackers will hold their State Convention at Pottsville on the 15th of June, to be followed the next day by an old fashioned picnic at Girardville. Gen. Weaver, Hon. Gilbert De La Matyr and Jesse Harper, of Illinois, are to be the principal speakers.

If there is any vitality left in the party, Weaver is determined to bring it to the surface, and at the same time reinstate himself in the good graces of the rank and file, who are inclined to look askant at him, after the terrific overhauling he received at the hands of prominent Greenbackers last Fall.

A prominent Republican politician who is an intimate friend of Senator Conkling, recently said to a correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial; "This is the last Republican administration. It would be as well to paint a sign and put it over the White House door thus: 'James A. Garfield, last republican tenant of this building.'" He added "I believe the republican party is holding the last term of its lease of power. We can write over its tomb: "Killed, but not by the Democrats." The view taken by this gentleman is that the dissensions in the Republican party are past remedy and that, whether Conkling is defeated or not, the States of Ohio and New York will surely go Democratic at the next election. This is a stalwart opinion and is entitled to consideration.

THE FIGHT AT ALBANY.

There does not seem to be a possibility that Conkling and Platt will be re-elected United States Senators. In spite of the most vigorous and untiring work by Conkling and his friends, they were unable to secure a majority of Republicans for the caucus and thus a defeat was foreshadowed. A ballot was taken on Tuesday and resulted in 35 votes for Conkling, 9 in the Senate and 26 in the House. Platt received 29 votes, 8 in the Senate and 21 in the House. It requires 80 votes to elect. The Democrats voted for Kernan and Jacobs, the former receiving 54 votes and the latter 53. On Wednesday a second ballot was taken and Conkling lost one, having only 34 votes to his credit, Platt held his 29 votes. It is probable that there will be a deadlock for several days to come, but the chances of Conkling and Platt will not be improved thereby. If the Democrats remain firm, the election of Senators may be postponed until another Legislature is chosen. In that event the people would have a chance to express their views.

LYNCH LAW.

That suspected criminals should have fair trials and be given every chance to establish their innocence, is a proposition sustained both by law and justice. It not infrequently happens that circumstances, which at first sight, point conclusively to the guilt of the accused, are readily dispelled when submitted to judicial investigation. But of late years the delays of the law have grown interminable and so numerous are the legal devices used by shrewd lawyers, that the crime is well nigh forgotten before the final decision is reached. In an adjoining State a murderer, still unhung, has already had three trials, in each of which a verdict of guilty was rendered, and there yet remains a chance for pardon. As a result of such delays there has arisen in some parts of the country, a feeling of uncertainty and of impatience that has led to the unlawful and unwarrantable hanging of persons whose guilt was considered past doubt. Those who read newspapers carefully must have been surprised at the number of lynchings that have occurred during the past twelve months. Most of these summary executions have been for monstrous and revolting crimes, and this fact has to a great extent restrained public condemnation of those who unlawfully punished the guilty. Lynch law is utterly indefensible—it is opposed to the written law and to every principle of decency and morality—and it is to be deplored that there are many instances in which right and justice are set aside in favor of the indignation and wrath of the hour. If lynching were resorted to, where there are no courts to try the offenders, the matter would be different, but such is not the case. In the majority of lynchings during the year, the prisoners have been taken from the custody of the Sheriff and out of securely fastened cells. It is impossible not to conclude that in these cases the people were unwilling to await the slow and doubtful process of the law. A subject so grave as this demands, and must eventually receive the attention of our law-makers, though in just what way the present modes of legal procedure can be changed cannot be determined without study and reflection. The main point to be decided is, whether the guilt or innocence of a prisoner can not be determined with less delay than is now available to those who have money to pay for the best of legal talent.

McManes After MacVeagh's Scalp.

A Harrisburg special in the N. Y. Sun says: It is said here that James McManes the Gas Trust boss of Philadelphia, is determined to drive Wayne McVeagh out of the Cabinet, and that he predicts that his purpose will be attained before Congress meets in December. About three weeks ago McManes went to Washington to confer with Blaine upon matters of public interest. In the course of conversation he told Blaine that some time previous to the meeting of the Chicago Convention a conference was held at the office of Wharton Barker in Philadelphia, at which, besides Barker, McManes and MacVeagh, and others hostile to Grant, were present. McManes told Blaine that at this conference Barker enthusiastically advocated the nomination of Garfield, believing him to be the most available candidate, but that MacVeagh vigorously opposed Garfield, saying, according to McManes' report of the conference: "It will never do to nominate Garfield, for he is so steeped in corruption that his candidacy would require a continued defense of his connection with wood pavement contracts and Credit Mobilier, and other corrupt transactions. "I never heard any man," said McManes to Blaine, "say such harsh things of another as MacVeagh said of Garfield on that occasion, and I cannot for the life of me understand why a reformer like MacVeagh could accept an office under a President so corrupt as he represented Garfield to be." And McManes is credited with saying that Blaine replied thus: "The acceptance of the Attorney Generalship by MacVeagh, under the circumstances, is not near so singular as that Garfield appointed him to the office, knowing, as he did what MacVeagh had said of him, for every word uttered on that occasion was faithfully reported to Garfield."

The judicial apportionment bill passed the House finally on Wednesday by a vote of 135 to 25. By this the number of judicial districts are increased nine and the number of judges fifteen. If the Senate adds a few, the people will have no cause to complain of want of Court facilities.

Circuses have been unusually well attended this year, and we have no doubt that Columbia county will keep up the average if an opportunity is afforded.

Bishop Howe visited St. Gabriel's church at Sugarloaf on Thursday evening of last week, and confirmed two persons, Rev. L. Zahner accompanied him.

J. Saltzer's advertisement of the celebrated Estey organs and musical merchandise is omitted this week to make room for reading matter.

[Kansas City Mail.]

Member of this Department relieved of rheumatism by the use of St. Jacob's Oil, says Geo. W. Walling, Esq., Superintendent Police New York, in one of our exchanges.

Three wandering minstrels, with violins and harp, made merry music on the streets, Friday and Saturday last. They played lively airs that were far more pleasurable than the doleful ditties ground out of the hand-organ.

The Jeffersonian of West Chester mentions the capture of an eagle a few days ago. The huge bird measured eight feet four inches across the the wings, and three feet from bill to end of tail. A royal fellow indeed.

Half the ills of human life proceed from a torpid and disordered liver. Submit to them no longer while "Seller's Liver Pills" will cure you quickly. Price 25 cents. may20-4w

For Walter A. Wood, New Warrior and Eureka mowers; also Wood & Royce Reapers, Farmer's Friend grain drills, Advance and Gale chilled plows, and all implements used on farms; also Lister Bros. Fertilizers, go to S. C. Shive.

The Clinton Democrat has donned a new dress and looks as neat as a daisy. The office material has been replaced by new, and everything is pronounced to be in the best of order. We congratulate our colemporary on the improvements.

For good Cabbage Plants go to W. H. Yetter. He has about one and a half acres best seed sowed, and plants fine. may27tf

There have been several sudden deaths in the county, within the past few days. It is noticeable that these sad events, like other evils, very frequently follow each other in quick succession. They are sharp admonitions of the uncertainty of life.

Decorous behavior characterized Decoration Day in Bloomsburg. The streets were crowded during the afternoon and evening, but there was no breach of the peace, undue noise or disorder. It was a general half-holiday and was quietly enjoyed.

The dust on the roads has been "quite frightful to see," of late, and driving has been attended with much discomfort. The road between Bloomsburg and Rupert was particularly objectionable, the dust being of the most powdery description, and from two to three inches deep.

The heaviest shower of the season visited us on Wednesday afternoon. The rain fell in such sheets that the water pipes were insufficient to carry off the water from the roofs and it poured over the cornices in small cataracts. Main street was transformed into a swift running stream and was for a time impassable.

On Friday last, Mr. Reece Eck was engaged in planting corn on his farm in Briarcreek. The heat was intense and he was attacked by sharp pains in the head. These became so severe that he was compelled to stop work and return to the house. He grew worse rapidly and in a short time died. His age was about 50 years.

Vennor's prediction that June would begin cold and wet is not very much out of the way, so far at least as moisture is concerned. The weather prophet says further that the 5th and 9th will be stormy as wet and that there will be frosts on the 7th and 8th. Don't get your furs out—the chances are you will not need them.

W. H. Jacoby, Esq., returned from Pittsburg on Monday morning. The "big Ingin" law suit, in which he was a juror was not finished but was continued to the next term of court. Mr. Jacoby greeted his friends with a warmth that left no doubt of the sincerity of his delight at reaching home again.

The little English cock sparrows have all the vices attainable by feathered folk. They are quarrelsome, greedy and pugnacious and it has been discovered that they are perfect Mormons, having from four to seven wives each. Decent and respectable birds ought to shun the society of these reckless and degraded twitterers.

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Normal School, held on Tuesday evening last, the following officers of the institution were elected: President, Hon. William Elwell; Treasurer, H. J. Clark; Secretary, F. P. Billmeyer. Standing committees were appointed by the President, and are the same as during the past year.

Judge McClean, of Gettysburg, has written a letter, stating that by the act of May 1, 1879, trials of speed at agricultural fairs are made legal in respect to walking, trotting and pacing. The decision of the supreme court in the Montgomery case, although rendered March 31, 1880, and recently published in the Legal Intelligencer, was based on a case arising prior to the relieving act of 1879.

The sale of Bickley's Preparations are still on the increase. Gross after gross are shipped to the large cities while the trade at home exceeds any thing of the kind known to this locality. The Worm-killing Agent, Wine of Gentian and Iron, Cream of Camphor and Rose Pectoral are the most reliable, as well as the most pleasant medicines known. Call on your druggist for circulars. Simply a trial will convince you of their excellence.

For all practical purposes, the town clock may as well be stopped, and suffered to accumulate dust and cobwebs. A time-piece that is always unreliable is worse than none, for there is nothing more exasperating than to put faith in a clock only to find that you have been grossly deceived. The one over the Court House is something like half an hour slow.

If you have pimples, boils, salt rheum, rough skin, &c., take "Lindley's Blood Searcher." Sold by all druggists. may20-4w

Williamsport is anxious to have this year's Democratic State Convention held there. Well, why shouldn't the city of saw mills have that distinction? It's a pleasant place, with hospitable people, and the delegates would be well treated. Williamsport has been depressed of late by its big debt and the holding of a Convention might brighten things up a bit.

The Normal School nine went to Wilkes-Barre last Friday, and in the afternoon played a game of ball with the Academy boys. They were victors by a score of 13 to 12. A game was to have been played with the Seminary club at Kingston, on Saturday but the latter refused to play, owing to the absence of one of their number. Bloomsburg is looking up in the base ball world.

The rite of confirmation was administered by Rt. Rev. M. A. DeWolfe Howe in St. Paul's Episcopal church on Friday evening last, when seventeen persons were admitted to membership of the church. An able sermon was preached by the Bishop. Rev. C. E. Fesenden, of Catawissa assisted in the service. Several persons were confirmed at Catawissa in the afternoon.

The Thirteenth Annual Session of the West Branch Camp Meeting will be held at Lock Haven, commencing Tuesday, August 9, and closing Friday morning, August 19.

The people of Sunbury must be a good-natured lot. For several weeks past the streets of that town have not been lighted, owing to a disagreement between the authorities and the gas company in regard to the price, and now the Gazette quietly remarks, "We hope that the disagreement may be soon adjusted." That sort of mild resignation is simply angelic.

Chas. Eayre Hinkle, Jersey City Heights N. J., writes: "My son, a lad of twelve years, was completely cured of a terrible case of Eczema by the Cuticura Remedies. From his head to his feet was one mass of scabs."

The New York Sun makes mention of remarkable electrical phenomena in different places and says that many scientific men trace a close connection between the excited condition of the sun and electrical displays on the earth. As the sun has not yet reached the culmination of its period of disturbance, yet more startling outbursts of nature's forces in our atmosphere are likely to be witnessed during the coming summer. It may come to pass that the year 1881 will be a notable one in the history of the globe.

THE THORN PAPERS.—We have just received from the publishers, a copy of this little book, which combines wit, humor and rare good sense in every article. The articles are written by Kate Thorn, one of the most popular and pleasing writers of the present day; are specially adapted to public and private readings, and will give satisfaction to every purchaser. The book will be sent to any address on receipt of ten cents, by addressing J. S. Ogilvie & Co., Publishers, 25 Rose Street, New York.

Messrs. M. C. Sloan & Bro., have just completed a double phaeton, which for elegance of design and beauty of finish, excels anything of the kind we have seen in this part of the State. The body, which is very light and graceful, is painted black and dark green, with delicate lines of gold. The upholstering is dark green, and the material used is of the best quality. This fine vehicle was made for a gentleman of Philadelphia, to whom it was sent on Tuesday. The Messrs. Sloan have every reason to feel proud of their work, and may safely challenge comparison with any of the city manufactures.

Monday's Philadelphia Times contained an article written for the Harrisburg "roosters," in choicest Indian—of the Crow variety—urging those legislative chantichleers to begin a libel suit without delay. Nobody in the COLUMBIAN office could successfully wrestle with it and so it was taken to Hon. W. H. Jacoby, who was fresh from the "big Ingin" law suit in Pittsburg. Strange to say, that gentleman was unable to decipher the dialect and we will probably never know whether it is correctly written or not. It seems odd that a man should forget his "Ingin" so soon.

The condition of the soldiers' graves in Rosemont Cemetery is not at all creditable. No attention is ever paid to them except on Decoration day. The question of a monument seems to have been abandoned. There is, somewhere, a fund, raised for the purchase of a soldier's monument, which has been on interest for eight or ten years, amounting now to nearly three hundred dollars. If no more can be raised, this sum should be expended for the purpose for which it was intended. Let us no longer neglect to honor the memory of the dead in a fitting manner, and on all occasions.

Mr. J. Paul Frey of Beaver township announces himself as a candidate for Associate Judge. About four years ago Mr. Frey was so unfortunate as to break a leg, whilst cutting timber in the upper part of the county. The broken limb was set by Drs. Edwards and Patterson of Benton and, as Mr. Frey claims, the operation was improperly performed. The bones have not united and the leg is useless. He brought suit for malpractice against the two doctors, laying his claim at $10,000. The case was tried before arbitrators on Tuesday, in the Court House, but there were so many witnesses that it was not finished on that day. The arbitrators postponed a further hearing until Thursday afternoon. At this writing it is still on trial.

The sale of copies of the revised New Testament has been unprecedented, and thousands of persons to whom the former edition was wholly unfamiliar, have devoted themselves eagerly to the task of comparison. The general opinion expressed by both clergymen and laymen is that the work of revision has been done with the utmost care and with an earnest desire to attain as near perfection in translation as is possible. The people are conservative and will not readily adopt the new version to the exclusion of the old. Possibly, in course of time it may be accepted, but it is more than doubtful if the present generation receive it, especially as ministers do not seem to insist upon its use in churches. The changes made are, for the most part, not startling, but some of the chapters best known and loved are so altered as to be scarcely recognizable. The work of the revisers will receive its full meed of praise half a century hence.

The festival of the Bloomsburg Cornet band began on Saturday evening last. The tables were spread on the public square, but the weather assumed so threatening an aspect that it was deemed advisable to adjourn to a more sheltered place. Brower's Hall was selected and therein the band and their friends enjoyed themselves to the utmost. There was no lack of music as there were two visiting bands present, one from Orangeville and the other from Afton, and these played alternately until a late hour. On Monday evening the weather necessitated a postponement. The festival was continued during Tuesday evening, and as the rain fell heavily, Brower's Hall was again occupied. It is to be hoped that the amount realized will be sufficient for the purchase of the new uniforms.

SUDDEN DEATHS.

Last Sunday, Col. Hiram R. Kline, of Orangeville, accompanied by his wife, spent the day with their son at the farm, a short distance above the town. In the evening they started to drive home and had gone but a short distance from the house, when he raised his hand to his head, saying, "I believe I am growing blind." Almost instantly he fell back dead.

Col. Kline was in his 66th year, and has long been one of the most prominent citizens in the county. He had taken a lively interest in public affairs and was an honorable, upright and conscientious man. In his young manhood he was deeply interested in military matters and rose to the rank of Colonel in the militia. During the rebellion he was captain of a company of emergency men. For several years he held the position of Collector on the canal at Beach Haven. He served a term as member of the legislature at Harrisburg, with credit to himself and satisfaction to his constituents.

Col. Kline was warm-hearted, generous and considerate, and was beloved by a large circle of friends. He will be sadly missed, and the regret at his death will be sincere. The funeral took place at Orangeville on Thursday morning and was largely attended.

Jacob B. Kistler, who for many years had been the proprietor of the "Catawissa House" in Catawissa, died very suddenly on Tuesday morning last at about eleven o'clock. He had occasion to go into the cellar to draw some liquor and his delay in returning caused alarm and led to a search. His body was found lying on the floor, with blood flowing from the nose and mouth. It is thought that he overexerted himself and burst a blood vessel. His wife was spending the day near Espy and his daughter in Danville. Both were at once notified of the sad event and returned to find the husband and father beyond earthly aid and sympathy. Mr. Kistler was a courteous and obliging landlord and was well known and esteemed by the traveling public. The funeral services were held on Thursday afternoon, and the remains were interred in the German Reformed Cemetery.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Monday last, the day set apart for the strewing of floral tributes of honor and respect over the graves of the brave men who fell in the battles of the rebellion, was as fair as heart could have wished. Although there were to be no public ceremonies until the afternoon, there was a general disposition to observe the day as a holiday. The streets were early filled with young people, many of whom came from the country, all intent upon enjoyment. The crowd increased as the hours wore away and at three o'clock Main street was thronged with spectators. The band and firemen assembled on the public square and marched up Main street to the Normal School, in the following order: the Bloomsburg Cornet band, preceded by the Marshal, and his aides; the Friendship Fire Company, and the Reserve Hose Company. The men looked and marched well, though the heat was too intense for comfort. At the Normal School, the Philologian and Calliepian Societies joined the ranks, and the line of march was taken up, to the Cemetery, the procession passing down Main street, to Market, thence to Rock street and to the Cemetery. After the band had played an appropriate selection, D. A. Buckley, Esq., delivered a brief address, which was appropriate to the occasion and well received. At the conclusion of Mr. Buckley's remarks, the Normal School societies sang "Cover them over with beautiful flowers," and then the graves were decked with choicest buds and blossoms. The exercises were of short duration, a fact rendered necessary by the intense heat that prevailed. Those who took part in the proceedings are deserving of commendation. The Normal School students have never failed to do all in their power to properly celebrate Memorial Day.

Safety for Cattle.

In view of the recent loss by fire of fifty-two head of valuable Jersey cattle, secured in a barn on the Dawson Coleman estate in Pennsylvania, which were literally roasted in the burning building, which contained eighty tons of hay and straw, an agricultural engineer writes as follows to the Country Gentleman:

"The modern improved barn is a costly, cumbrous death-trap, devised under mistaken ideas of economy of labor and with a view of magnificence of show. There is not a barn of the kind in existence to day that is really worth a tithe of its cost for its convenience, nor is the safety of the stock shut up in it assured for twenty-four hours. The accidental dropping of a lamp, the treading upon a match, the ignorant leaving in a corner of a handful of oily rags or a painter's overalls for twenty-four hours, might start a conflagration; and the smoke and heat will, in nearly every case, prevent access to the poor creatures, which are confined under a large quantity of the most inflammable material in wide open barns, so constructed as to become the most active, fierce and rapid cremation furnace in existence, with open cupolas for a draft chimney, and wide spaces and floors to furnish the blast. It is a wonder that sensible farmers can be so thoughtless and inconsiderate, especially when the system has no other recommendation in its favor except show.

"Cattle may be kept in perfect safety in separate sheds of very cheap construction, which may be made as ornamental as desired. These may be so arranged as to be connected with the barn, root cellar and feeding room in the most convenient manner for feeding; each animal may be kept loose in a separate stall, with doors which can be opened in an instant, and every animal released in case of fire.

"Such disaster as the loss of a building can be repaired with ease, but the loss of stock is irreparable, to say nothing of the harrowing knowledge that they have been cruelly burnt alive as a sacrifice to their owner's mistakes. If he wants an elegant barn as an ornament for his farm, well and good, but as a business matter let him have his costly and favorite cattle kept comfortable out of reach of a fire, which may any day or night consume the costly tinder-box called the barn."

Mangels.

Any good rich soil, the richer the better, will give a paying crop of mangels. A strong gravel is good, or a sandy loam, but I prefer a heavy loam, almost clay; if naturally or artificially underdrained, this, if rich, will give the very best results both as to quantity and quality. I have had splendid results by manuring in winter or early spring; I have also had the same by using a corn stubble well manured. I have also raised fine crops succeeding a crop of mangels. The main point is to have the land rich and fine; plow deep and be careful to plow well; harrow, cultivate and roll till the surface is mellow and no lumps are left; mark rows thirty inches apart, with a marker similar to a corn-marker. Sow not less than 200 pounds of bone flour and three bushels of salt per acre; to do this throw it lengthwise of the rows, so as to get all you can immediately on them. For ridging the ground we use a three-tooth cultivator or corn hoe, by removing the centre tooth, and setting the others so as to throw the soil toward the centre, and to let the horse follow the mark we make a slight but sufficient ridge, just where we desire the row. The reason for ridging is because all lumps and stones naturally roll down hill, and of course away from the row of small plants that are directly on top of the ridge, and we can begin to cultivate much sooner by having the land ridged.

Poultry Manure.

Poultry manure is by far the most valuable fertilizer produced on farms. Fowls eat concentrated food that is rich in nitrogen and phosphorus, and their droppings partake of the nature of the food they devour. Grain, the seeds of small plants, meat, and insect protines, when decomposed by the action of the digestive apparatus, richer fertilizing material than grass, hay, and straw. Besides, birds void their urine in a solid form, and combined with the excrement that is usually solid. As a consequence, it is not liable to be wasted if the manure is rightly cared for. Poultry manure is about as valuable as the best Peruvian guano. To make it of the highest value as a fertilizer, however, it must be stored, and applied to the ground with care. Exposed to the weather it will be dissolved by rain and carried off. Placed in large heaps it heats and the ammonia is driven off and lost. Applied to the soil in too liberal quantities, especially when fresh, it is liable to destroy the vitality of seeds and to kill delicate plants. It should be stored in a dry place and in comparatively small lots so it will not be injured by moisture and not ferment. It is better to mix it with dried peat, road dust, or some other substance that will aid in keeping it dry and tend to arrest fermentation. The best results attend its use when it is well beaten up and very thoroughly mixed with these substances before it is applied to the soil. Lime and ashes should be kept from it, as they act upon it in such a manner as to liberate ammonia.

A correspondent of the Hartford Times writing from New York, says: There are in Broadway three five-story marble-front buildings which have stood idle for fifteen years. This property should be good for $50,000 a year at the very least. It has not produced a dollar during the long period named. The taxes on it amount probably to $10,000 a year. The interest on the money invested in it must be at least as much more. If it were rented like other property it would have yielded at least $750,000 in the time named. Instead of that it has cost the owners in taxes and interest not less than $830,000. Why is it not rented? Nobody knows. There it stands, year after year, a monument of vacancy and heavy loss. "To let" bills are on it all the time, but it does not let. I am told that it belongs to a wealthy family in France, who sent money here many years ago for investment. They have never seen it, and its control is entirely in the hands of an agent. He watches it closely, and is always polite to persons making inquiry about it; but for some inexplicable reason he never strikes a bargain with any one. A gentleman told me recently that during a visit to France a few years ago he tried to see the head of the family that owns it for the purpose of negotiating for it, but the Frenchman, a gruff old Count, would not give him an interview. The property is going to decay, in the heart of the business part of New York.

FRAUD.

Tens of thousands of dollars are squandered yearly upon traveling quacks, who go from town to town professing to cure all the ills that our poor humanity is heir to. Why will not the public learn common sense, and if they are suffering from dyspepsia or liver complaint, invest a dollar in Spring Blossom, sold by all druggists, and indorsed by the faculty. See testimonials. Price 50 cents, trial bottles 10 cents.

IMPROVEMENT FOR MIND AND BODY.

For genuine merit there is no tonic sold that begins to compare with Parker's Ginger Tonic. One 50 cent bottle contains more life and strength restoring power than a bushel of malt or a gallon of pure milk. As an appetizer, blood purifier and kidney corrector, it meets with astonishing success, and invalids find its use promptly followed by renewed energy and vivacity, mental and physical improvement, and gradual restoration to perfect health. GET OUT DOORS.

The close confinement of all factory work, gives the operatives pallid faces, poor appetite, languid, miserable feelings, poor blood, inactive liver, kidneys and urinary troubles, and all the physicians and medicine in the world cannot help them unless they get out of doors or use Hop Bitters, the purest and best remedy, especially for such cases, having abundance of health, sunshine and rosy cheeks in them. They cost but a trifle. See another column.—Christian Recorder.

A RELIABLE WINE.

Mr. A. Speer, of New Jersey, whose Port Grape Wine has such a wide reputation, and which physicians prescribe so generally, was the first in this country to introduce the art of making wine from the Oporto Grape, which is now the best wine to be had, and has become the favorite among the most prominent physicians of New York and Philadelphia, who have visited the vineyards and wine cellars of Passaic. Families and aged persons are benefited by it. For sale by C. A. Kleim, Druggist, Bloomsburg Pa.

It is a Mississippi man who puts it thus: "At the earliest solicitation of those to whom I owe money, I have consented to become a candidate for county treasurer."

A SIGNIFICANT FACT

The cheapest medicine in use is Thomas' Eclectric Oil, because so very little of it is required to effect a cure. For croup, diphtheria, and diseases of the lungs and throat, whether used for bathing the chest or throat, for taking internally or inhaling, it is a matchless compound.

Several persons recently broke out in the Bergen county jail. It was with the measles, and the sheriff says it was a rash attempt.

LATEST FROM MAINE.
Leck's Mill's, Oxford co., Me.
Messrs. Morris & Ireland:
Gents:—On the 22nd of November, 1879, our spool mill at this place, 50x65, two stories high, was totally consumed by fire, in which there was a large quantity of spools, lumber, spears and blocks, all seasoned. The fire burned for three and a half days, we had one of your safes in our mill and Tuesday morning (Nov. 25), eighty hours after the fire, it was too hot to handle, being covered with burning blocks, some time after it was opened and the contents were in a good state of preservation, not a book or paper being destroyed. I am satisfied with your safes and have purchased another, and can cheerfully recommend them to any one wishing to secure their valuables from being destroyed by fire.
Yours truly, I. G. TEBBS.

TREMENDOUS TEST.
Roasting Thirty Hours in a Bed of Red Hot Coals.
Corning, N. Y., January 6, '81.
Morris & Ireland Boston, Mass.
Gentlemen:—On the night of the fire in our village on the 26th ult., I had in use one of your No. 5 Safes. I am pleased to inform you, after the floor gave way it fell into the cellar, into a heap of burning coal, where it roasted for thirty hours. Our citizens and myself gave up the loss of anything being saved in it, on being taken from the ruins I was happily disappointed to find my cash, vouchers and other articles of value perfectly preserved. The combination works well now. I am satisfied your new and improved work, one of which, a No. 20, I have ordered of your agent to-day, will afford absolute protection in any fire.
Truly Yours, E. S. BARNES.

STILL AHEAD.
Colchester, N. H., Dec. 16, '80.
Messrs. Morris & Ireland:
Dear Sirs:—In the disastrous fire which took place in this town Nov. 30, the Morris and Ireland safe in my store was subjected to a severe test, being thrown into the cellar and a huge mass of debris fell upon it, and it was in the ruins some two days. I take pleasure in informing you that upon excavation it was opened without trouble and the contents were found to be unit jured. I cheerfully recommend your safe and should I want another I should certainly purchase one from you.
Yours truly, C. W. HOWE.

STILL ANOTHER.
From the Great Fire in Troy, New York.
Troy, N. Y., December 11, 1879.
Messrs. Morris & Ireland, Boston:
Gentlemen:—After witnessing the charred books out of the safes purchased of you some years since by the firm of Rice, Kendall & Co., and which was subject to the heat of enormous heat in the great fire of last Sunday night, I regard the security of the safe under the circumstances as most remarkable. None of its contents were burned, nor were any of them so injured by heat as to be materially damaged. I should commit any securities to your safe hereafter with additional confidence. With great respect, yours very truly,
Alexander H. Rice.

THE LATEST YET.
BUT THE SAME RESULT.
So. Norridgewock, Me. Feb. 1, 1881.
Messrs Morris & Ireland, Boston Mass.:
The safe I bought of you last October was in a woodenly wooden building, which burned Jan. 26. The building took fire in the night, and the safe, building and its contents, fell into the cellar upon a pile of dry wood, making a hot fire which lasted for two hours. The outside of the safe was cherried red hot. It melted the handle and shut off the door. Its contents consisted of watches, jewelry, silverware, books, papers &c., all of which came out in good condition. Paper as white as the inside of the safe were not injured. The safe shows for itself what it is, and I feel well satisfied with what it has done. Please write what you can allow for it towards a two one, and oblige.
